Education

"I am self-taught in the medium of polymer clay. In 1989 I began jewellery-making using glass beads, found objects, gemstones and wood. I started using polymer clay in 1994 to create beads and from 1998 onward polymer clay became the focus of my jewellery work. Since 2000 I have been exploring the medium beyond making beads and have created landscapes, mosaics and sculpture. Access to polymer clay publications and online resources has been useful but has had its limitations. As a result, all of my work has been self-directed."

Lara

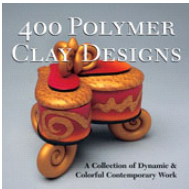

Workshops

Lara has also demonstrated her art at several community events, including the Heart of Downtown celebrations in 2005, the Longest Days Street Festival in 2005 & 2006, Canada Winter Games in 2007 and several Art and Music Festivals in the last 10 years.

Biography

There is a sunny cabin, off the grid, near the shore of Shallow Bay. This is the ideal home and studio for Yukon artist Lara Melnik. Primarily self taught, Lara has been making unique jewelry for many years. Her obsession with beads has driven her to create her own, using polymer clay and the ancient Italian technique of millefiori canework. She has a strong attraction to striking colours and this is evident in her recent exploration of the medium. Lara has been creating small landscapes and abstracts by blending and layering the clay. Texture, colour and relief play an important role in these scenes and three-dimensional wall sculptures. Tiny gardens and forests of whimsical mushrooms seem to "grow" right out of the wall. Lara is happy making art that puts a smile on someone's face.

She was rewarded with first prize People's Choice Award for Jewellery at the 2001 and 2003 Great Northern Arts Festival in Inuvik, NWT. She has participated in numerous shows in the north including seven solo exhibitions in Whitehorse and has been published in the fine art book 400 Polymer Clay Designs. She is a member of the Yukon Artists @ Work co-operative gallery and Yukon Arts Society. Through teaching workshops, Lara shares her love of this colourful medium and exposes people to it's artistic strength.
